André Fu

Hong Kong architect André Fu was just 30 years old when he set a new benchmark for hotel interiors with his design of The Upper House. A decade on, an eponymous monograph published by Assouline profiles the hotel and 14 other projects that define Fu's idiosyncratic 'new Asian style' - a quietly assured blend of Oriental serenity and international luxury. A comprehensive visual inventory of 93 photographs and 6 sketches is paired with insightful commentary on inspiration offering an insight into how the young designer is fast becoming a defining figure in contemporary interior design. The 176-page tome includes forewords by Stephen Alden and Emmanuel Perrotin. Project highlights include London's The Berkeley Hotel's Opus Suite and Fu's distinctive collection for Tai Ping Carpets.
